

Mendocino County Community Workshop

Housing Element Update and Environmental Justice Element

Mendocino County is updating its Housing Element - a state-mandated plan that outlines how the County can accommodate the housing needs of all residents. The County is also developing its first Environmental Justice Element, which works to ensure every community has fair access to a clean, healthy, and safe environment.

This workshop will focus on the Housing Element's housing sites inventory and housing priorities. The project team will provide an overview of how the County identifies sites to accommodate future housing needs and discuss priorities for addressing housing and environmental justice across the community.

Please join us to learn more about these planning efforts and share your insights on housing and environmental justice conditions affecting Mendocino County communities.
